BLAINE'S LETTER.

How It is Construed by Journals of Various Shades of Political Opinion.

We give below a number of press comments on Mr. Blaine's letter. The tribune, his leading organ, edited by his especial friend, Whitelaw Reid, says;

[New York Tribune.]
We print elsewhere a letter from Mr.
Blaice firstly making an end of any possible consideration of his name for the Chicago nomination. All now know that tut for the Florence letter Mr. Blaine was sure to be pinated by acciamation and equalir sure, we think, of an election. Even after the Fiorence letter it was so obviously the over-Fiorence lefter it was so obviously the over-whelming desire of Republicans ever-where to make him the candidate in suite of him-self that of late there has been little doubt among either friends or foes that the nomination would still be tendered him. With a full knowledge of this he makes haste to say that he now considers himself nd by his Florence letter to refuse a nom ination, even if it came to him unsought and against his expressed wishes. This is an act of magnanimous self-abnegation rare in po-htical history and sure to command the ap-preciation of his regretful but admiring countrymen. Meantime the Republican party is confronted with the immediate necessity of making another choice. Unite the party in power, it thinks it has many men in its ranks it for the highest honors of the country. The one question now, as from the beginning, is. Which one of them is at once sure of the Republican States and strongest in the doubtful States?

in the doubtful States?

NOT YET OUT OF THE FIELD.

[Philadelphia Times.]

That Mr. Blaine himself as not unmindful of possible contingencies is suggested by the fact that after his fresh withdrawal he goes on to deliver a sort of stump speech on protection that will be generally accepted as a long doubt of the seems to be no doubt of the fact that after his fresh withdrawal he goes on to deliver a sort of stump speech on protection that will be generally accepted as a long good work and olepts of first class. on to deliver a soft of stump speed of pro-tection that will be generally accepted as a renewed hid for leadership. It would not have been difficult for a man familiar with the plain use of the English language to say t only that he could not but that be on accept a nomination. But this is Blaine is not yet out of the field. DISSOLUTION OF HIS PARTY.

Upon whom will the honor devoive? That will be the absorbing question for the next three weeks. A cluster of favorite sons are eager for the honor of carrying the aban-doned banner. New York will have Depew; Conto, Sherman; Iowa, Alban; New Jersey, Phelps: Indiana, Harrison; Michigan, Alzer; Hilnois, Gresham, Around the flag of Gresbam cluster hopes and opportunities which no other candidate attracts. There ine's withdrawn means the dissolu interest, care to take personal sides.

orning, will effectually remove all lingererity of his letter from Florence in January ast. At the time that was published his soutical enemies eagerly grasped at what her thought might be an ambiguous ex-ression to question his good faith and to oread the impression that his letter to Mr. Jones was the hyperitical act of a tricky politician. Some too, in the Republican parts were both to accept as final the With-drawal from the presidential contest of one om they had looked as the greatest po- month

MR. BLAINE'S EMPHATIC "NO."

(New York Times.)

It certainly seems needful for Mr. Blaine to use a great many words to say he will not under any circumstances take. the nominanot we fear that there are still some of ssible that the convention should not be it. The process of "dusting" and usclessly disgraced itself. These Republicans have voluntarily declared that the character of the man, his name, and the public reproduction of him as the polls, would not prevent them from again placing him at the head of the party fact that will weigh in the approaching con-test, for it remains as true as it ever was that Biainelson dominates the party and must either entrol its candidate, whoever be may be, or determine his fate. If that candidate be the choice of those who would have taken Blaine. He issue will be just as have taken Blaine, the issue will be just as clear. If by any improbable combination of forces it be a man of different and better stamp, the Blaine knife will not be sheathed, but will be driven home on election-day.

MB. BLAINE'S FINALITY. Charles Emery Smith, another of Mr. Binine's confidential friends, says:

"Mr. Blaine's communication to Mr. Reid has been anticipated for some days, and must finally and conclusively end any thought or talk of making Mr. Blaine the presidential conditate. ididate.
As every man who knows the character

"As every man who knows the character or the spirit of Mr. Blane knew, he meant his letter from Florence to be decisive. In spite of that declination the Republicans of the country have elected an actual majority of delegates to the National Convention who prefer Mr. Blaine's nemination. In the face of his own expressed wish and in the absence of any organized effort this manifestation of the Republican will have been made, but Mr. Blaine's purpose his remained unaltered, and watle millions of Republicans have hoped that he might consent in the end to yield to the unmistakable wish of the Republican majority, he removes all uncertainty by this latest and conclusive deliverance. The purpose thus announced must be respected. pose thus aunounced must be respected. The Republican representatives will yield to Mr. Blaine's declared purpose and will seek their candidate for President among the other eminent and honored Republicans who are worthy of the great place.
"The earnest Republicanism and the high patriotism of Mr. Blaine speak in every line of his letter and will enthrone him still more firmly in the hearts of Republicans through-out the land." ONE OF TWO THINGS THEE,

RELIEVES THE CHICAGO CONTENTION. [Philadelphia North American.]

This journal accepted the withdrawal from the field announced in that letter as being succere, and therefore conclusive. It could see no reason why Mr. Biaine should write such a letter if he meant any less than its terms implied, and it had a higher opinion of his courage, and the next in his dealing. terms implied, and it had a higher opinion of his courage and honesty in his dealings with the public than to suspect him of any mental reservations. His Paris pronunciamento justifies those opinions and relieves the noministing convention from all embarrasament. It is now entirely free to choose the strongest candidate the party has produced, and as it surveys the long list of "eligibles" which will be brought before it, it will find no better, safer, or more thoroughly svaliable standard-bearer than Judge Walter Q. Gresham. Walter Q. Gresham.

WILLIAMSUEG, VA., May 30, 1888.
The programme which was rendered at the Methodist church last sunday night-celebrating Children's day—was prenounced by all to have been one of the most besuifful and interesting celebrations of the kind that has taken place here for some time. The church was literally packed, many not being able to get in the building. The managers, Miss Miles and the Misses Davis, are to be congratulated upon getting up the celebration and the excellent manner in which the programme was rendered.

Colonel Stevenson had a letter of introduction to our postmester from First-Assistant Postmaster-General Stevenson.
